FALL BONFIRE 2006

This year's Bonfire was a huge success, with several thousand BTU of heat generated and dozens of pounds of meat and meat-like soy product cooked. Furthermore, for the first time in 11 years, not a single CHP-er was lost to ocean's fatal grip. Freshmen were introduced to Sophomores, Sophomores were introduced to Juniors, and Seniors brutally flogged several of them all. We braved the sandy winds and the prospect of indigestion to uphold solemn heritage of our CHP forefathers, several of whom had courageously sacrificed their lives at the great Battle of the Brains. As the sun set, we were reminded of all the memories accrued from bonfires attended in the past, and of all our failed attempts at the endless search for the Mysterious Green Flash.
